

As a business owner you have to worry about many things and stormwater pollution may not be one of them. However, the new NPDES Permit under the Federal Clean Water Act has newer, stricter provisions for restaurants.

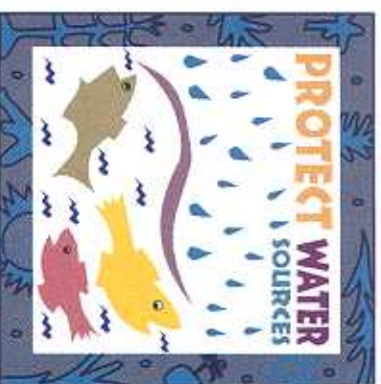

Therefore, stormwater pollution is now something that all businesses, especially restaurants, must be aware of.

Stormwater pollution occurs when trash and spills are washed into the storm drain system through cleanup methods such as hosing down sidewalks and patios.

In an effort to ensure that your business is meeting those requirements, we have put together a list of general things you can do, to eliminate your restaurant's contribution to stormwater pollution.
